

A rare opportunity to acquire this characterful period cottage in the sought-after semi-rural village of Denstone, approximately five miles from Uttoxeter. Sitting on a 0.15 acre plot and constructed of stone and brick beneath a Staffordshire Blue tiled roof, the property offers spacious, oil-fired centrally heated accommodation rich in original features.

Set behind a stone retaining wall with raised lawn and driveway providing ample parking, the home also benefits from a substantial double garage and rear garden with patio and well-stocked borders.

Internally, the accommodation comprises a welcoming hallway, characterful dual-aspect lounge with exposed beams and feature fireplace, spacious kitchen/dining room with fitted units and integrated appliances, large utility room, cloakroom WC, and a conservatory overlooking the garden. To the first floor are four good-sized bedrooms, two with en suite facilities, together with a family shower room.

Denstone offers a range of local amenities and schooling, with further facilities available in Uttoxeter and Ashbourne, while the nearby Weaver Hills provide delightful countryside walks.

Viewing by appointment only.

Features

To the front of the property, the garden features a charming and distinctive historic well, complete with an attractive stone seat positioned above it. This characterful feature adds notable interest and a sense of heritage to the setting. Although the well was filled in during the 1970s, it offers exciting potential for reinstatement, subject to any necessary consents, providing an opportunity for a future owner to further enhance this unique aspect of the garden.

We have been informed that the property is offered for sale with its original title deeds, dating back to the early 1900s, providing a tangible link to its past. The earliest recorded evidence of a sale indicates that the original part of the cottage pre-dates 1820, reflecting its long and established history. This provenance enhances the home's character and appeal for those seeking a property of genuine heritage and distinction.
